

the Capt'n expected we should have until reaching the sun which was vertical about 18 North - Of course this was very bad for our progress - but this constant breeze so moderated the temperature that we thought it a great boon - for it must indeed be fearfully hot in this small crowded ship, in calms, with a nearly vertical sun - with the exception of today & one other, we have had adverse winds ever since May 7th rather an unusual thing I fancy -

As to the people, they are a peaceable well disposed set & have got on very well together, I believe rather enjoyed the voyage, & each others society - I must not clap my self among them, not being able to say I've done either -

I liked the White heads, especially Mr G, was sorry when they left at St Helena - & I like & respect Mr Glover - but tho' his kind friendly ways sometimes to me have been pleasant, yet we have too little in common to be at all real friends, & besides they don't seem to me to be very much in him - Do you know what I mean? Its unsatisfactory when there seems no depth in people - when one dives into them even-tally, & comes suddenly out on the other side, long before you want ^{to do so} - But their being on board has been indirectly a great protection & comfort in many ways - He is the only man on board worthy of the name of Gentle man - besides Capt'n Spencer & perhaps Mr

John Anderson - but the latter is a very silent reserved invalid: so I only know him negatively, so to speak - You will recognize their names as in the list you kindly copied for me - Capt'n Spencer, about whom if you remember we indulged in various speculations, turned out to my surprise ^{to be} an old acquaintance of my sisters, & slightly of my self - One whom I had met at Grandmama's seven or eight years ago - He knows most of my Aunt's & Uncle's, some of them very well - I saw many of them just before leaving England last November - It was so pleasant to meet one who could give me such late personal news of them - & whom in this wilderness of strangers seemed almost like a friend - I did not find it out until we were at "Ascension" which was May 4th - Very kind & pleasant & friendly he has been to us both ever since - but ^{is} one of those polished kind of people who have seen so much of the world & of that hollow thing we call in England Society - that the real natural part of him, if much of it is still left, is so far down that one can't get at it - & when that's the case I can't feel real friends with any one - He was in the Rifles - but has sold out now, & is I fancy just travelling about for his pleasure - He paints minutely & has given us two pleasant mornings looking over his portfolios - Many beautiful views taken in the Crimea - He is 38 - It has been very pleasant feeling there ^{is} a gentleman on board whom I've a right to ask for help or protection - because he at once kindly offered his services - You know any crew about those kind of things - I mean asking favours - It is now Friday morning 31st we are steaming up the Channel in a thick drizzling fog which makes every thing damp & dreary & the whistle continually shrieking to warn other ships of our neigh^{bourhood} - My hands are so cold I can hardly write legibly - tho' trying hard - for I don't want to tax your time or patience much - You will please tell me Dr Bleek, when you do write, if you could read this easily - To return to our fellow-travellers - Mrs Colting, the widow of the Moravian missionary, is a nice pleasant woman - but ^{she} speaking but little English I could not know much of her - until finding out a few days since she spoke French - since which time we've had some pleasant chats - Miss Asten I also rather like - a middle aged, sensible, independent woman - who has been engaged for some ^{English} Society for promoting education - at the Cape - These are the only people on board I've at all cared to be with - Having dear Mr Fisher has been a great comfort & protection as you may fancy - We've had a good deal of fun in our cabin (a very comfortable one by this bye) & ^I daresay rather surprised any one who overheard our merry laughter - So I fancy I'm looked upon generally rather in the light of a Dragon or some other unpleasant phenomena - for one or two people ventured to take liberties with me notwithstanding my extreme

"The Celt" about 150 miles from Plymouth - Thursday night May 30th 1861 -
My Friend -
I wrote a few lines to you just before reaching St Helena & left it there to be posted after we had left otherwise you know it would have been put with the St Helena mail ^{that} we are taking to England - So I've just a hope it may reach you before you receive this - I am so wishing to know how - & where - you are - I do hope not suffering from the winter weather, at least not much, for I fear you must feel it a little, even if at Natal - I wonder if you are there - & if you've seen Loui - & how you like her - I should have had a long letter written ere now to you, but have not been at all well during the voyage, a very seldom equal to writing; so have only this evening finished my first letter - to Loui of course - & now begin to you - You said I was to tell you about our voyage & fellow passengers - I will try - You will see by my date that we are making an unusually long passage - but, with the exception of two rough days with very strong head wind this week in the Bay of Biscay, it has been a very fine one as to weather - only one rainy day, & three or four hot ones - for we carried the South East Trades up to crossing the line May 6th & the very next day caught the North East Trades - instead of meeting with the calms which on the whole a dreary time to me - And I've not felt well or strong in other ways either, much of the time - However this last week I do really feel as if the voyage has done me a little good - My back stronger & altogether not feeling so nervous & silly as I used - & with a voracious appetite - And I suppose I shall ^{be} ^{by} when it's over, some good which it has been in other ways - morally or mentally I mean - Which I confess I can't now - except perhaps in one or two lessons ^{not} to trust people too readily - & not to expect much in their characters - much that's noble & good I mean A rather painful lesson - but one that makes me doubtly value my few real friends -

I must leave off now for the present - having to pack up, so we hope to be at Plymouth some time this afternoon - We mean to land there as this ship will not reach Southampton until too late to morrow for the Custom House so we should be detained there until Monday ^{for our boxes} _{on that account} - which would be very tiresome -

London June 4 - To my dising this must go at once, so I only add one line to say we've arrived safely - I shall tell you all the rest ready for next mail or perhaps for another chance if posted in London tomorrow.

At Kensington it must be posted a day earlier - I'm pretty well & have rec'd a dear note of welcome come from Aunt Fanny - the one I told you I like best - but she is at Brighton, so dear Mrs Fisher makes ~~her~~ stay with her a week or so to finish my London commissions it is - I've not yet seen the Dr, but shall soon - only think - the "bark" in which the Vanderzouws sailed on Feb 4 27 from Natal has not arrived - I am so frustrated for she had called at St Helena on March 27th so she ought to have been here 3 weeks ago - she had no lightning conductor too - So tell me all about yourself when you write - Goodbye my dear friend - very sincerely your intro due to Messrs Trübner has been such a heth - he was so kind to day & asked much after you - I've just come back from city - I hope you'll read this thro' very sorry it's so bad, to trouble you, but I'm in that haste I can hardly form a letter - quickness of demeanour - so I had to put a stop to that; & did it in rather a decided manner - which I believe was fortunately made people rather afraid of me - I say fortunately, because much as I dislike any thing furious in a woman, yet almost any thing is better than not being able to take care of yourself when with no natural protector - Oh we laughed so this morning, some one whom I'd offended yesterday - a great un-savoury coz - was trying to find out from Mr Fisher how old I was, & gave ^{it as} his opinion that I must be at least 38 - I was so "crabbed" - But if you saw what a set the men here are, with the afore-said exceptions, & what free & easy manners almost all the ladies permit - you would understand how any one who doesn't choose to have that sort of thing is rather unpleasantly placed - I've thought of you so many times - & how you wd tell me I was "very vicious" sometimes - were you here - Mr Fisher has been pretty well & I think liked the voyage - people much better than I have.

You know she is more easily pleased - besides of course being more pleasing - I was better than few days be-fore we reached St Helena than I've felt since - until this week - I've suffered from seasickness whenever it was the least rough & indeed quite half the days of our voyage have been too giddy ^{to} read or "work at all - or even to think with comfort - so you can understand how, being very much alone, it's been
